

Fraser McDonald

Dr McDonald's undergraduate qualification was completed in 1980 at Birmingham University. After three years general dentistry he then completed the orthodontic training programme at the Royal Dental School, London under the supervision of Professor William Houston. Upon completing his Master of Science, he then became a lecturer in Oral Biology integrating physiology and orthodontics in the University of London. He is currently the Head of the Department of Orthodontics at the Dental Institute of Kings College London.